

Neurological Disorders

Provider conducting the assessment, rendering a diagnosis, and providing recommendations for reasonable accommodations must be qualified to do so and a current treating licensed provider that the student has an established, therapeutic, relationship with (e.g., neurologist, neuropsychologist, psychiatrist, clinical psychologist, clinical social worker, licensed counselor). Provider documentation cannot be obtained from an immediate family member of the student.

Neurological disorders are numerous and refer to impairment of the nervous system, including the brain, spinal cord, nerves, and muscles. Examples of neurological disorders include, but are not limited to: cerebral palsy, seizure disorders, sleep disorders, stroke, or traumatic brain injury. Documentation submitted in relation to a neurological disorder must state a student's current functional limitations and may require periodic updates if there are changes in the student's functioning. The nature of the specific neurological disorder and its impact on the student should be reflected in the documentation submitted to SAS.

At minimum, the providers letters are required to have the following information included:

- Current treatment methods for disability related symptoms
- Any recommendations the provider has for reasonable accommodations, based on the impact of these stated symptoms, in the higher education environment
- Provider's practice and complete contact information, including length of treatment
- Provider's signature
- Provider's documentation letter must be dated for the current valid school year, all housing accommodations are updated on a yearly basis.
